today, Tuesday 21.05.2024

A low-pressure system will continue to influence the weather throughout the upcoming days. The differences in air pressure should gradually decrease, making daily periodic effects more pronounced. As a result, long-lasting stable weather will not establish itself, and until the weekend, we can expect rain showers during the day, followed by occasional thunderstorms. Although the sun will make appearances, especially in the mornings and occasionally for longer periods over the valleys, the risk of rain showers will be higher in the second half of the day. Temperatures will show only a very slow, slight upward trend, so it will not get significantly warm for now.
